Covid-related race withdrawals

In light of the announcement of the planned lifting of Covid restrictions by the Government on 19th July and following some Covid-related withdrawals at some recent races, we confirm that should a racer be forced to withdraw from a race that he/she has entered due to having tested positive for Covid or having to self-isolate, then the ROC will arrange for the race entry fee to be refunded if the ROC is advised in advance of the race date. Racers/parents may be required to provide evidence of the need for self-isolation.

Racers and parents may consider taking a lateral flow test prior to departing to a race venue and must also comply with any restrictions that may continue to apply at a specific venue.
